

Women in Construction Law:

Breaking Barriers, Building Bridges

We are proud to celebrate the women in our construction law team who are making a difference in the industry.

The construction sector has traditionally been male-dominated, but societal attitudes are evolving and organisations are recognising the value of diverse perspectives. As a result, there has been an influx of talented and skilled women in the construction sector and industry. These women not only contribute their legal expertise, but they also influence positive changes in workplace culture and industry practices.

Our team of construction law experts are young, dynamic, and innovative. We harness cutting-edge technology to ensure optimal efficiency and we collaborate across disciplines to deliver top-tier service across sectors.

We are committed to creating a more equitable and progressive future for the construction industry by working with these women who are making a difference. We are excited to see what they will continue to accomplish in the years to come.

Here are our construction law female experts:

Megan Jarvis
Partner

Sarah McKenzie
Partner

Lisa Swaine
Partner

Kate Collier
Partner

Ofentse Mazibuko
Associate

Michelle Diers
Associate

Nazia Dinat
Associate

Brittany Leroni
Associate

Learn more about the work we do here

WEBBER WENTZEL

in alliance with > Linklaters